MESSAGE TO

ALUMNI

DEAN MARY KAY KANE

Court Mast

AT ITS SEPTEMBER MEETING I PRESENTED TO THE Board of Directors my annual report for 1993-94, detailing the numerous things the College attempted and accomplished in the past year. Thus, I thought I would share with you some of the highlights of that report so that you, too, can appreciate what an exciting and active place the College continues to be.

PERSONNEL AND PROGRAM DEVELOPMENTS

The enormous turnover in personnel this past year produced one of the most significant challenges to the College. During 1993-94, 31 staff members left Hastings, 8, including the Dean, as part of the University's early retirement program (VERIP), and 5 faculty retired, 2 as part of VERIP. On the decanal side this necessitated two major searches, for a new Dean and later an Academic Dean, with Board/Faculty Search Committees. Both were successfully completed with my appointment as Dean in December and the appointment of Leo Martinez as Academic Dean in July. Three new tenure-track faculty members also were hired. Details about our new colleagues appear on page 3.

Looking to the future, the faculty completed its review of the 65 Club and recommended to the Board—who approved—the reconfiguration of those positions into Senior Professorships. This will allow Hastings to maintain its tradition of having an excellent senior faculty while recognizing that changes in retirement laws and the like have altered the market for attracting senior national scholars and teachers to Hastings from their current institutions.

The departure of so many staff members also provided the opportunity to re-evaluate staffing and service needs in several areas. For example, after the retirement of our Director, a careful review was conducted of the Legal Assistance Clinic, which was operated at UCSF to provide basic legal services to medical, dental, and nursing students. After we reviewed its educational components and talked with UCSF about their needs, it was determined to close that facility and to redirect those resources to our on-campus clinical program, where they can more effectively enhance our clinical education offerings.

It is important to highlight the extremely productive year that the faculty had in its scholarship, research, and public service endeavors. Specifics will appear in upcoming issues of the Hastings Community. Suffice it to note here that during 1993-94, the Hastings faculty published 8 books and 15 annual book supplements; 17 law review articles; 8 chapters in books; and 5 book reviews. Faculty members also presented papers and made speeches and presentations at 37 different events, ranging from national scholarly conferences to state and local bar meetings and various specialized organization meetings. Additionally, more than 13 CLE talks were given to various groups. Many of these activities were supported by the 1066 Faculty Development Fund and through our summer research stipend program, and the faculty is very grateful for these most critical means of support. In the public service arena, Hastings faculty members sat on more than 30 governing boards and advisory committees. These ranged from national education associations to state commissions to local bar committees to community school boards and other charitable organizations.

Turning to programmatic developments, the faculty continued its review of the upper-class curriculum and agreed to review next fall specific proposals for possible specialization programs in several areas within the J.D. curriculum. The objective is to approve one or more in time to implement them for the 1995-96 academic year. Also, the trial skills courses were integrated to provide a more unified structure, allowing for the development of advanced offerings in the area. Finally, the first preliminary report of the Bar Passage Study was issued and will form the base for review of numerous academic and admissions policies this next year.

Our auxiliary academic programs were very active and implemented a number of improvements during 1993-94. For example, in the Moot Court Program increased efforts were made to more actively recruit and involve local attorneys and judges in our intramural moot court program. The result was the involvement of more than 200 lawyers and jurists as judges in that spring program. Also, the College sent students to participate in six intercollegiate moot court competitions where Hastings students distinguished themselves, winning several regional awards and advancing to the national level in three competitions.

Our scholarly publications program continues to be an important and highly visible component of our academic program. This year, in addition to the publication of 20 issues by our 5 established scholarly journals, a new journal, West-Northwest, focusing on environmental issues of particular interest in the western region, was founded, and its first issue published. Three very successful symposia also were held on campus where scholars, practitioners, and students were able to explore highly topical issues ranging from "Constitutional Theories of Adjudication" to "Privatizations in the International Arena" to "Computers and the Law."

In 1993-94 our academic support program, LEOP, completed a total restructuring of its tutorials, moving to a skill-based program focused on legal writing and analytical skills, rather than on substantive review sessions. Further, a seven-week performance workshop was added for third-year students in the spring, replacing a three-day workshop, in an effort to try to improve our bar passage results.

Finally, the Library embarked on a program to increase services, developing special training programs taught by library staff for judicial externs, scholarly publication members, and faculty research assistants.

A new series of open brown bag lunches also was inaugurated this past spring, discussing various specialized research tasks, such as how to conduct a legislative history search.

FISCAL MANAGEMENT AND AUXILIARY SERVICES

Undoubtedly, the most significant event in 1993-94 involving our long-range financial planning was the decision of the Board of Directors in December to offer for sale the four residential buildings on the West Block. The decision came after a multi-year review of the College's needs and opportunities for development of those properties. Their public bid sale in the early summer has brought to a conclusion years of uncertainty and problems associated with the maintenance of those holdings.

Reports on the College's other business holdings are equally positive. For the first time in several years, the Tower had 100% occupancy. The College's other operating business, the Bookstore, expanded its services and outreach, adding new sections for law professionals (alumni) as well as for students, and adding two small law schools as users when the neighborhood legal bookstore closed.

Several of Hastings' other auxiliary or support services also had a very busy year and inaugurated additional programs or initiatives worth noting. To begin with, for the second time in the past four years, Hastings admissions applications exceeded 5800. We extended slightly more than 1300 offers of admission to this group in order to yield a class of approximately 420.

To improve the services provided to students while they are at the College, security in the 198-classroom building was augmented, and an electronic data exchange was established between the Financial Aid Office and the U.S. Department of Education to simplify and expedite the loan application process and receipt of funds. In addition, the planning and design of a computer network for the Career Services Office to increase student access to job information and exchange and for the installation of an E-mail system for faculty and staff to facilitate their work was accomplished.

Several activities and programs also were hosted on campus, increasing the sense of community. These ranged from Hastings' 115th birthday celebration during Orientation to the Faculty-Student Cabaret in January to the alumni-sponsored Third-Year Gala Champagne Reception in April. Additionally, in an effort to expand personal contacts throughout the Hastings community, a student buddy program was initiated and an alumni mentor program was begun. These latter two programs got off to a successful start in 1993-94 and will be refined and expanded upon this coming year.

Finally, numerous outreach efforts were made to try to help students in their job searches. Of particular note is the fact that Hastings staff worked with the Disability Rights Committee of the San Francisco Bar to develop a new summer pilot clerkship program. Of the 22 Hastings students who applied, 8 were hired—more than from any other school. Similarly, the College participated in the summer minority clerkship program for first-year students. That program is sponsored by the Santa Clara, Alameda, and San Francisco bar associations and nine of our first-year minority students were selected as a result.

ALUMNI INITIATIVES

The results of our various fund-raising efforts in 1993-94 appear later in this issue. What I would like to highlight here are some of the events and activities sponsored by the College, its Alumni Association Board of Governors, and its 1066 Foundation Trustees.

In 1993-94, the College continued to host several high visibility events that were open to students, faculty, and alumni, and that received excellent—oftentimes national—news coverage. We sponsored the Second Attorneys General Forum (with TV coverage by C-SPAN and Court-TV), the Tobriner Lecture featuring Judge Leon Higginbotham, and the Founder's Day Marvin Anderson Lecture, featuring Judge William Webster. Additionally, our Continuing Legal Education offerings were expanded to include a special program on the new Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, with more than 100 lawyer attendees, and the second in the Ultimate Anatomy of a Trial Series: "A Candid Conversation About Trials." This latter program had an audience of more than 200 and was filmed by Court-TV, which co-sponsored the program with us. These events, coupled with our established College of Advocacy programs in June and "Beat the Clock" program in January, provide an important service to the bar, as well as enhance Hastings' reputation as a high-quality provider of legal training.

Off-campus alumni events also were at an all-time high. A total of 22 events were held, ranging from new student receptions, chapter dinners, and lunches recognizing local alumni achievements to new bar admittee receptions. These events were held across California, as far east as Washington, D.C., and as far west as Hawaii. More than 1500 alumni and guests attended these off-campus gatherings. Our alumni reunion weekend also was a great success, with attendance increasing by 25 percent to 424 attendees. The Alumni Association also sponsored or co-sponsored 12 different student events on campus. Special receptions for potential and existing major donors also were hosted by the 1066 Foundation, including small lunches with the Dean in Los Angeles and San Diego, and larger receptions in conjunction with the Attorneys General Forum and Founder's Day activities.

Finally, it is important to note that Hastings won three awards this past year from the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) for various aspects of its College Relations programs. One award singled out our Attorneys General Forum for excellence in special programs. Another recognized our achievement for carrying out an extensive public affairs campaign "on a shoestring." And the third and most recent award was given to our alumni program for its many and varied events. These awards are a further indication that the kinds of activities and approaches we are taking in this area of the College are recognized by other professionals as being excellent models in building a successful and comprehensive alumni program.

CONCLUSION

It is appropriate to conclude by noting that I have presented only highlights of this past year. I could not possibly detail all the things that have happened and that have contributed to our successes. But even this brief review illustrates, I believe, the essential strength of the College—despite increasing financial constraints due to decreasing levels of state support, we continue to be forward-looking, displaying through our efforts an abiding commitment to keep Hastings at the forefront of legal education, and to have students and alumni who are justly proud and pleased to be part of such a grand institution.

Mary Kay Kane
Dean, Hastings College of the Law
September 1994

This semester, four professors joined Hastings' talented full-time faculty:

NEW FACULTY

PROF. ASHUTOSH A. BHAGWAT will teach contract and antitrust law this year, after practicing regulatory and appellate law in Washington, D.C. for two years. His primary research and teaching areas are administrative, antitrust, and economic regulatory law. He received a B.A. degree in history from Yale University in 1986 and a J.D. degree in 1990 from the University of Chicago Law School. After law school, Bhagwat clerked for Judge Richard Posner of the Seventh Circuit, followed by a clerkship with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy.

PROF. RORY K. LITTLE, who was recently featured on ABC's "Nightline," will be teaching criminal procedure, criminal law, and professional responsibility. He first taught at Hastings in the fall of 1993 and has taught as an adjunct professor at Boalt Hall since 1990. He clerked for U.S. Supreme Court Justices Potter Stewart and William J. Brennan, Jr., and, in addition, worked for Congresswoman Olympia J. Snowe. He also worked for private firms before joining the U.S. Department of Justice, where he served as a trial attorney for the Organized Crime and Racketeering Strike Force and later as chief of the Criminal Appellate Section for the U.S. Attorney's Office in San Francisco.

PROF. SHAUNA I. MARSHALL will be teaching the civil justice seminar and helping supervise the Civil Justice Clinic. She received her B.A. degree from Washington University, St. Louis, in 1976 and her J.D. degree from U.C. Davis in 1979. She served with the Justice Department's Honor Program as a trial attorney in the Antitrust Division and as a staff attorney for Equal Rights Advocates. Marshall recently received her J.S.M. from Stanford University and directed the East Palo Alto Community Law Project.

PROF. UGO MATTEI joins the Hastings faculty as the first holder of the Fromm Chair, an endowed professorship allowing Hastings to add a distinguished professor of international and comparative law. He will be teaching comparative law and a law and economics seminar. Mattei received his LL.M. degree in 1989 from Boalt Hall, where he was a Fulbright Fellow. He also attended the London School of Economics and the Faculte Internationale de Droit Compare in Strasbourg, where he has been a professor since 1992. He is a tenured professor at Italy's University of Trento and is a member of the editorial board of both the International Review of Law and Economics and the Italian law review Quadrimestre. He had been involved in field research in comparative law in Somalia, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Sudan, Congo, Cameroon, Japan, and Israel. ☞

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION GIVES GRANT FOR IMMIGRATION LAW CLINIC

Prof. Richard Boswell

THANKS LARGELY TO THE EFFORTS of Prof. Richard Boswell, who has taught immigration law at Hastings for the past four years, the College received a $70,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education Law Clinic Experience Program. The grant will be used to establish a legal clinic dedicated to assisting the community with immigration law matters. The clinic is scheduled to open in the spring and will be housed in the Civil Justice Clinic on the third floor of 100 McAllister Street (the Tower).

Boswell also served as an election monitor for the Dominican Republic elections in May. He was part of an international delegation selected by the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs and led by former Congressman Stephen Solarz. ☞

GIFTS TO HASTINGS REACH ALL-TIME HIGH IN 1993-94

PRIVATE SUPPORT FOR HASTINGS REACHED AN ALL-TIME HIGH IN 1993-94. Contributions totaled $3,020,266.67, which represented a nearly 200 percent increase over the 1992-93 fiscal year's gift total of $1,035,257.68. Overall gifts in 1993-94 included both Annual Fund and Hastings 1066 Foundation donations, as well as a variety of other gifts, including a very generous bequest from the Harry and Lillian Hastings Estate of more than $2,150,000.

Gifts to both the Annual Fund and the Hastings 1066 Foundation also registered some impressive gains in 1993-94. More specifically, Annual Campaign donations increased by nearly 7.5 percent this past fiscal year, from $314,976.25 of such gifts reported in 1992-93 to $338,527.40 in 1993-94. The number of donors to the Annual Campaign increased during the same period of time by nearly 4 percent, from 1,568 campaign donors reported in 1992-93 to 1,629 recorded in 1993-94.

ALFRED M.K. WONG, NATIONAL CHAIR OF THE 1993-94 ANNUAL CAMPAIGN.

In announcing these results, Dean Mary Kay Kane noted several key factors that had contributed to the obvious success of last year's various fund-raising efforts. She began by citing the leadership efforts of the National Chair of the 1993-94 Annual Campaign, Alfred M.K. Wong, a 1964 Hastings graduate who resides in Honolulu. Wong's efforts included, among other things, the undertaking of some special fund-raising initiatives in his own home state to help expand private support for Hastings. Dean Kane went on to comment: "I also want to salute our very active class agents, as well as the dedicated members of the 1066 Foundation's Board of Trustees. The initiatives of these most loyal graduates and friends of Hastings have helped make this past year's significant gains possible. Both they and Al Wong cannot be complimented enough for all the time and effort they put forth on behalf of the College."

Dean Kane also expressed the College's deep appreciation to the members of the student "phonathon" committee for conducting a most successful annual telephone campaign. Indeed, as Dean Kane observed, "The students this past year increased the annual phonathon results by more than 25 percent, from the 1992-93 phonathon tally of $30,563 to $38,830 generated in 1993-94!"

Dean Kane also shared the results in the annual—and friendly—competition among the classes for the highest rate of participation in the campaign. For the second year in a row, the Class of 1938 registered the highest participation rate, with 52 percent of its members making contributions to the 1993-94 Annual Campaign. The Class of 1976 recorded the largest number of donors, with some 81 of its members making contributions to Hastings in 1993-94. And the Class of 1977 registered the largest overall gift total, with nearly $17,000 having been contributed by members of that class in 1993-94.

Dean Kane saluted all the members of the various classes who made contributions to the College this past year, when she observed: "Once again, our alumni constituted nearly 90 percent of the total number of donors to the Annual Campaign. Their loyalty and generosity to their alma mater cannot be overstated. At a time of continuing decline in the overall economy—a time that has been a particularly tough period for attorneys—and of ongoing reductions in state financial support for the College, our graduates have answered the challenge by providing the private support that is so essential to preserving our law school's widely recognized margin of excellence. Thanks, in part, to their most loyal and much appreciated contributions, it's no wonder that our law school remains ranked among the top 10 public law schools in the country in the U.S. News and World Report's latest rankings of the nation's top law schools."

NORMAN T. SELTZER TO CHAIR 1994-95 ANNUAL CAMPAIGN

NORMAN T. SELTZER WILL BE SERVING AS THE NATIONAL Chair of Hastings' Annual Campaign for 1994-95.

A 1942 summa cum laude graduate of Hastings, Seltzer is the senior partner in the San Diego law firm of Seltzer, Caplan, Wilkins & McMahon. The National Chair of the Annual Campaign works closely with the Hastings 1066 Foundation and class agents in cultivating private support for the College.

In addition to being a donor to the 1066 Foundation and a loyal supporter of his alma mater, Seltzer also has played an important role as a civic leader in his community. To cite just a few instances, he has served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the San Diego Community Foundation and is the current Chairman of the Mercy Hospital Foundation. Having had a long-time interest in the quality of legal education, Seltzer also has been a member of the Board of Visitors of the University of San Diego School of Law since 1975.

The two members of the 1066 Foundation Board of Trustees who reside in the San Diego area, Elizabeth Bradley and Robert Wright, could not have been more complimentary upon learning of Seltzer's selection as National Chair. As Wright noted, "Norman Seltzer is one of the most respected lawyers in San Diego County and is truly an excellent choice to serve as the National Chair of the 1994-95 Annual Campaign." Dean Mary Kay Kane added: "I can only echo the fine sentiments expressed by both Mr. Wright and Ms. Bradley about Norman Seltzer's appointment to this most crucial position. Under Mr. Seltzer's leadership, I know that the annual fund-raising campaign will prove to be a great success. All my colleagues at Hastings and I are looking forward to working this year with this most gracious and highly respected gentleman."

In a fall letter to alumni and friends kicking off the 1994-95 campaign, Seltzer noted that "...the overall reputation of our alma mater, its faculty, and students is something we can all be proud of. Ours, indeed, is a long tradition of excellence in legal education. We also have another strong tradition at Hastings—private support to help preserve the law school's margin of excellence. Indeed, the law school was established in 1878 thanks to a $100,000 endowment provided by the College's founder and namesake, Serranus C. Hastings. Since that time, many other alumni and friends of the College have made generous contributions in support of our continuing mission of providing the very best training to the next generation of lawyers."

Seltzer also noted "that private support has always played a pivotal role at Hastings and, indeed, is becoming even more crucial during the state's continuing economic downturn." Seltzer, who has encouraged his fellow alumni to join him in making a contribution to the Annual Campaign, will be serving in his role as National Chair from July 1, 1994, to June 30, 1995.

Honor Roll of Donors

July 1, 1993 - June 30, 1994

The following pages recognize the many generous donors, including the members of the donor clubs of Hastings College of the Law, for the fiscal year July 1, 1993, to June 30, 1994.

Gifts made after June 30, 1994, will be recognized in next year's annual report. If you find any errors or omissions, please contact the Office of College Relations at 200 McAllister Street, San Francisco, CA 94102.

The College honors these alumni and friends whose gifts add immeasurably to the quality of legal education at Hastings.

Thank you for your support.

"Being a part of LEOP was a terrific transition into the whole new world of being in law school."

Jayne (Ware) Williams ('74)

"Before I even got into the school, I had to interview with a committee of LEOP students. They were so supportive and so positive. They had wonderful aspirations of what they wanted to do to make the world better—all the things I wanted to do in 1971. It really motivated me," said Oakland City Attorney Jayne (Ware) Williams ('74).

"Once I got in, a group of people were there to greet me and we became good law school friends. Many of them remain close friends still." Among those first contacts was Carl Williams ('73), whom she later married.

"In the beginning, I think many on the faculty viewed LEOP as something they had to do for political correctness. I don't think they had yet realized the value of diversity and the exchange of ideas and backgrounds and cultures. Today, I think there is a real commitment," she noted.

"Still there are some traditional barriers that have to be broken down in the practice of law as an institution. Law school is an initiation rite, which, for the most part, has changed significantly since I went to school," she continued.

Not one to sit back, Williams is playing a leadership role in bringing about change to the legal profession in California. She serves on the State Bar of California's Commission for the Future of the Legal Profession and the State Bar. Williams has worked with the City of Oakland in various legal and administrative capacities since she graduated in 1974. She became City Attorney in 1987.

"We're talking a lot about the role of law schools and what it should be in the future. There is a real recognition that law schools have to produce people who are well-rounded and who are connected to what is happening in the world and our society. Law schools need to be more conducive to a lot of ethnic minorities and others who have those life experiences to contribute," she explained.

Apparently, her enthusiasm for the law is infectious. Her son entered the University of California Los Angeles this fall and wants to be a lawyer, too.

LEOP LEAVES ITS IMPRINT ON HASTINGS AND THE LEGAL COMMUNITY

By Susan Piper

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO HASTINGS ESTABLISHED ITS LEGAL Education Opportunity Program (LEOP). The program provided for the admission of students whose educational, economic, social, physical, or cultural backgrounds affected traditional preparation for law school. LEOP served then, as it does now, as an alternative means of evaluating an applicant's potential for the study of law. According to Professor C. Keith Wingate, the idea was that "there are students who are capable of successfully completing law school and becoming excellent attorneys but who are at a disadvantage in the admissions process with the traditional so-called predictors of success. Given an opportunity, a carefully selected applicant will do a good job. The program is proof of that."

The benefits of the program are quickly evident. Professor Howard Downs, who headed the faculty committee that made the initial evaluation of the LEOP program in 1972, recently observed, "There is no question that LEOP has given the school a much richer base, intellectually and culturally, in the teaching and experiencing of law. I am hopeful that the impact of the program at Hastings has reached back into the minority communities at various levels and has helped to influence them in the protection of their rights and the general implementation of American law in the various segments of our society."

Although the Hastings faculty originally conceived of LEOP as primarily an admissions program, the faculty soon recognized that to achieve its goals the program had to be expanded. Today, LEOP also serves as an academic support program committed to the success of LEOP students while at Hastings and their eventual admission to the legal profession. "It was an academic, emotional, and social support system," said Patricia Barrera ('91), a lawyer with the Latina Coalition of Public Advocates in San Francisco. "It was a pep talk, a confidence builder, and an academic help, providing us with the skills we would need to start 'running' the first year," added Barrera.

"LEOP leveled the playing field."

Hector Chinchilla
('86)

Today, LEOP is an integral part of Hastings' academic program under the full-time direction of Sue Lunbeck. The educational philosophy of LEOP has two principal tenets. First, professional assistance from legal educators experienced in training students from underrepresented backgrounds is essential to the achievement of academic excellence; second, students helping students creates a supportive environment that is most beneficial to learning. Mark Canepa ('88), a lawyer with the Fresno law firm of Baker, Manock & Jensen, says, "My second year as a LEOP instructor gave me the opportunity to teach others what I had been taught in LEOP. It was one of the most rewarding aspects of my experience at Hastings."

Lunbeck presides over a LEOP that provides a wider array of services than its predecessors. It starts with an intensive orientation program for first-year students. The five-day program before the start of the fall semester introduces students to legal analysis and teaches the fundamental skills necessary for the study of law, including how to write legal briefs, how to organize outlines, and how to approach the Socratic method.

During the academic year, group study sessions are held for all first-year courses. Second-year and third-year students teach the group sessions, helping first-year students to review substantive law and to develop problem-solving techniques. Individual tutoring also is available, if needed. Special workshops on outlining, examination strategies, writing, and legal analysis are held throughout the year. First-year students also take advantage of a nine-week test-taking workshop that provides feedback on exams.

The LEOP Colloquium Series supports second-year and third-year students in specific courses, such as constitutional law, evidence, corporations, and criminal procedure. Instructors are third-year students, who are selected on the basis of expertise, dedication, and teaching experience.

Finally, the LEOP "Bar None" program helps Hastings graduates to prepare for the California Bar Examination. The program emphasizes study techniques, exam taking skills, and practice, and provides constructive feedback. Instructors are practicing attorneys.

LEOP graduate Richard Sakai ('77) became a LEOP tutor because it gave him the opportunity to teach. "It helped me find the very reason I went to law school. As I started to run tutorial sessions, I realized how much I enjoyed teaching." Professor Sakai returned to Hastings as the full-time director of LEOP from 1986 to 1989 and now is on the faculty at Santa Clara University School of Law.

He added, "I remember sitting there as director and watching students walk across the stage to get their diplomas, and then continuing to hear from them over the years. I would hear about their progress in their careers, and their marriages, and expanding families. It was wonderful! That's what LEOP is all about—allowing people who otherwise would not have had the opportunity to go to a law school of Hastings' caliber to get educated there, and then turn around and serve their community."

Currently, 279 students benefit from LEOP's many services. Dean Mary Kay Kane states, "From its inception to the present day, LEOP has been a valued part of Hastings. The gains it has made through the years and the many successes LEOP graduates have had are something we can all take pride in. It is an important legacy to celebrate and to pass on."

Susan Piper is an Oakland-based writer and public relations consultant who frequently contributes to Hastings Community.

"LEOP helped me even before I started law school. LEOP permitted the admissions process to evaluate not only my academic history but also various other factors that tended to show my potential to become a good lawyer," said Hector Chinchilla ('86), a litigation partner at Crosby, Heafey, Roach & May in Oakland. He joined the firm right after passing the Bar in 1986.

Chinchilla took advantage of the LEOP first-year academic support program. The program had such a profound effect on Chinchilla that he committed himself to assist the program during the rest of his tenure at Hastings. "I TA'd or tutored in just about every first-year course there was; I also led colloquia on a few second- and third-year subjects. Because of the support I received, I wanted to help others to succeed," he recalled.

"Another benefit of the program was the relationships LEOP fostered. We formed our own study and support groups; we became quite close. Those personal relationships helped me make it out of law school in one piece," he said.

"When I was in law school, some resented LEOP and the students it assisted. Some believed that LEOP students had no place at Hastings, that we couldn't 'make it' or that somehow the LEOP students had an unfair advantage. From my perspective, LEOP only leveled the playing field. Once it did that, it allowed me to demonstrate the potential I always had.

"But above all else, I appreciate LEOP for instilling in me the confidence necessary to become a superior lawyer. I am one of the few lawyers in the class of '86 who made partner after just six years. There is no LEOP here at Crosby. At Crosby we all play on the same field and are evaluated according to uniform criteria regardless of our background. My success stems from my days in LEOP; LEOP helped me become the lawyer I am today."

A CANDID CONVERSATION ABOUT TRIALS

By David Ross Berson

On June 3, Hastings hosted "A Candid Conversation About Trials," featuring five of the nation's leading trial attorneys and a federal district judge: Roy Black, James J. Brosnahan, Joseph W. Cotchett, Diana E. Marshall, Michael E. Tigar, and the Hon. Barbara Caulfield.

The lively interchange, interspersed with video clips from notable trials, provided many insights and much laughter, as well as three hours of MCLE credit for the 220 attorneys who attended.

Court-TV Network's anchor Gregg Jarrett, a 1980 Hastings graduate, moderated the event. Jarrett, a former trial lawyer, divided the discussion into sections representing key trial phases. Each section was preceded by video clips from notable trials. A few highlights from the panelists' statements follow:

ON LAWYERS V. JUDGES. Judge Caulfield, a Hastings faculty member and trial attorney before serving on the federal bench in the Northern California District, remarked that an attorney can create insurmountable problems by appearing bent on antagonism. "You can't win that. Judges go through fitness training to deal with tough lawyers." She recalled situations in which jurors had told her they stopped listening to lawyers who were continually irate.

Black joked, "I do everything to exalt that wonderful person in the black robe sitting highest in the courtroom, whom everyone, particularly the jury, loves beyond any doubt whatsoever."

Cotchett, a 1964 Hastings graduate, said he typically tries to see how far he can go with a judge. "You push that envelope across the table until you feel the give, the take, or the wall that you may sometimes hit. When I hit the wall I generally stop. If I see I'm going down in flames, and that has happened, I take on the judge in a more aggressive fashion. You cannot let a judge steamroll you. If you do that, the judge decides the case and not the jury."

ON OPENING STATEMENTS. Tigar attacked a strategy that many attorneys follow of not offering an opening statement, declaring that he would never, under any circumstances, waive that right because it permits the attorney "to suggest to the jury a way to see the facts."

Judge Caulfield said that, in contrast to a closing statement, an effective opening statement must be understated. Cotchett, the successful lead counsel for 23,000 plaintiffs in the Lincoln Savings & Loan trial, countered that he doesn't believe in "a low-keyed approach. I take as much time as I can possibly get. I use whistles, buzzers, TV monitors. You name it, I use it." He added that although waiving the opening statement may be good policy in criminal trials, the same is not true in civil litigation. "The opening statement is what it's all about. Get up there and be aggressive, go for the throat, don't coddle the other side. Let them know that this is a very big, important case."

ON DIRECT EXAMINATION. Marshall emphasized that, despite thorough preparation, witnesses can be unpredictable. In her folksy style, the Texas attorney, who was recently named one of the five top women trial lawyers in the nation by Time magazine, said, "I have seen the devil, and I have tried to figure out how to cast him out of my client's body. Up there on the witness stand, they come out with some of the most incredible [stuff] you ever heard, and it's all new! You may have spent weeks and months with them [clients], and you've never heard that stuff before. I've had people up there, and suddenly I realize that they've got multiple personalities — and each personality has a different disorder! No matter how much you prepare [them], you cannot prepare too much. Of course, you certainly don't want to get their spontaneity crushed in the process."

Black, famed for his successful defense of William Kennedy Smith, characterized the courtroom as "a foreign place where everybody's scared to death." He has on occasion arranged for instruction of witnesses in expressing their inner selves. "If the witness cannot explain himself or herself, the case cannot be won."

ON CROSS-EXAMINATION. A video excerpt from the William Kennedy Smith rape trial showed Black demanding yes or no answers to short, simple questions that were repeated when a prosecution witness tried to give interpretive answers. Cotchett observed that repetition should and often does draw objections. Brosnahan noted, however, that "when you really get the momentum going, nobody's going to interrupt you."

Marshall added that too many lawyers wrongly think the cross-examination phase is a time to display hostility. "You look silly. The jury thinks, 'Why is this lawyer mad? He looks like he's out there dancing by himself. He looks ridiculous.'" The very best tool people have in the art of persuasion, she said, is "a gentle, seductive, wooing process."

ON CLOSING STATEMENTS. Tigar commented that the effect of a closing statement quickly wears off and is a loser if deliberation goes beyond thirty minutes.

Brosnahan called the closing statement, "the time to put good facts in the hands of those jurors who are going to argue for you and to soften up those who are against you."

Space limitations prevent us from printing more of the event, but the entire three-hour program was taped and will be telecast nationally. Consult your local cable TV listings for the exact date and time of the Court TV broadcast in early January 1995. ☞

HARRY H. & LILLIAN H. HASTINGS MEMORIAL FUND

Lillian H. Hastings, who died in 1992, made provisions in her will that continue the legacy of the Hastings family's generosity to the College. She was the widow of Harry H. Hastings, who died in 1985 and was the sole direct descendant from the male side of the Hastings family.

With proceeds from the sale of several works of art and real estate willed to Hastings, an endowment of more than $2 million establishes the Harry H. and Lillian H. Hastings Memorial Fund to be used for the benefit of the College.

Additionally, two large oil portraits from the estate, one of the founder of the College, Supreme Court Justice Serranus Clinton Hastings, and the other of his second wife, Azelia B. Hastings, now hang near the third floor elevators, outside the Dean's office in the 200 McAllister building. A smaller, seveneenth-century biblical painting is in the Board Room on the mezzanine of the 198 McAllister building.

THE KEITH R. FERGUSON ADMIRALTY LAW AWARD FUND

On October 7, 1993, Hastings received $100,000 from the Arthur Barlow Ferguson and Catherine Poetz Ferguson Family Trust to establish the Admiralty Law Award in memory of Barlow Ferguson's father Keith R. Ferguson.

An adjunct professor, who taught admiralty law at Hastings from 1965 until his death in 1974 at age 80, Keith R. Ferguson received his law degree from the University of Michigan in 1916.

During World War II, he served as a U.S. Navy legal officer, setting up the admiralty section of the 12th Naval District. He retired from the Justice Department in 1964 after singlehandedly establishing their West Coast admiralty and shipping office during his 17 years of service.

He had two children, Arthur Barlow Ferguson, a San Francisco lawyer who received his law degree from Harvard, and Nancy Dollar, wife of R. Stanley Dollar, president of the Dollar Steamship Company.

The Hastings Admiralty Law Award will provide much-needed special resources for students and faculty to assist them in the study of admiralty law.

HAROLD S. DOBBS 1919 - 1994

HAROLD STANLEY DOBBS ('42), former Chairman of the Hastings Board of Directors and 1983 Alumnus of the Year, died on August 14, after a long illness. He was 75.

"Harold attributed the education he received at Hastings to be one of the most important events of his life," said Max K. Jamison, past President of the Alumni Association, emeritus member of the Board of Directors, and former general counsel for Hastings. Jamison added that Dobbs, a Board member from 1967 to 1988, was one of his best friends, a superb lawyer, and wonderful family man. "Harold deemed it a high honor to be elected to the Board and to become Chairman. Time and time again, he put the business of the school ahead of his own personal practice and personal time. He believed Hastings deserved the best because that is what it provided to him."

Dobbs also will be remembered for his many generous financial contributions to the College. His family donated funds for a large seminar room on the fifth floor of the library dedicated to the memory of his son, Roger "Rusty" Dobbs, a former Hastings law student, who was killed in a 1974 car accident in Spain. Dobbs contributed faithfully each year to the 1066 Foundation and supported many projects, including the building of the Alumni Reception Center and the creation of the Attorneys General Forum.

In addition to his support of Hastings, he was well known for his work with philanthropic organizations, serving as director and president of more than a dozen organizations, including the Florence Crittendon Home for Unwed Mothers, the Lighthouse for the Blind, the San Francisco Zoological Society, the Saints and Sinners Foundation, and the San Francisco Jewish Home for the Aged.

Dobbs practiced law in San Francisco for 52 years and was a member of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors for 12 years. He also was a successful entrepreneur, establishing, among other things, Mel's, an innovative drive-in restaurant, which was featured in the film American Graffiti. He is survived by his wife, Annette, daughters, Marilyn Higuera and Cathy Goldstein ('80), sons, Stephen and Gregory, and many grandchildren.

Current Board Chair Charlene Mitchell summed up the feelings of many in the Hastings community, saying, "As a member of the Board of Directors and as Chairman of the Board, Harold Dobbs was an outstanding leader of the highest integrity. On a personal level, he was a great friend — warm, compassionate. I will miss his sage advice and his charming company. I will miss Harold Dobbs."

YOU NEVER WRITE, YOU NEVER CALL

Just like Mom, we'd like to know what you've been up to lately. Use this convenient form to update us on your activities and we'll include it in our Class Notes section in an upcoming issue of Hastings Community.

Even if you're not into show-and-tell, we could use the data to update our alumni records. In particular, we need information about your professional emphasis. This comes in handy when we are asked for referrals from other attorneys and to assist us in matching students with prospective alumni mentors/advisors. Or we may just want to invite you to something of special interest to you. You never know.

Return this form to: Hastings Community

ATTENTION: ALL HASTINGS LATINO ALUMNI!

An effort is being made to form a La Raza Chapter of the Hastings Alumni Association. This organization can serve many purposes, including professional networking, planning and sponsoring programs and events, and developing means of mentoring current La Raza students. The involvement and participation of all Latino alumni is welcomed.

We need to start compiling lists of alumni (especially prior to the Class of 1989) and organize a steering/planning committee. Patricia Barrera ('91), La Raza Chair for 1990-91, has volunteered to serve on the steering committee and encourages others to get involved.

Please contact Hastings College Alumni Relations Office with your name, phone number, and address, so that you can become part of this important organization: Alumni Relations Office, 415/565-4615.

Coming in your Spring Community . . .

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE THIRD ANNUAL ATTORNEYS GENERAL FORUM:

An annual tradition at Hastings, the Attorneys General Forum is a major campus event presented for faculty, alumni, and students of the College. The next issue of Community will include highlights of the October 1994 Forum—a lively, unrehearsed, roundtable discussion featuring former U.S. Attorneys General William Barr, Benjamin Civiletti, Edwin Meese III, and Richard Thornburgh, with Harvard Law Professor Arthur R. Miller as moderator.
